" HONESTY AND REPORM" were the tosin cries of our sweet-tempered Administration during the canvass of 1876. Was it houses to wait until the Senate had ad-journed before making the New York Cus-tom-House removals? Was it reform to remove officers against whom no charges had been alleged, and whose ability and integrity is even now conceded by Secretary SHERMAN himself?

THE New York Evening Mail, which, after a suspension of a few weeks, owing to business differences, was revived on the 4th instant, under the management of Major J. M. Buxtry, re-enters the field with renewed energy and vigor. In the resuscitanewed energy and vigor. In the resuscita-tion of the Mail Major BUNDY has wrung victory from apparent defect. With the paper freed from debt and embarrassing business arrangements, and a capital commensumte with its needs, the Mail promises a long, useful, and profitable life.

The committee's invitation to Government employees to con-tribute only one per cent.—instead of two— of their salaries is reasonable, and has met with cheerful responses in all of the Depart-ments, as well as from officials outside of Washington. THE Ku-Klux operations in the South are beginning earlier in the campaign than usual this year, and the Southern agents of the Associated Press will consequently be compelled to use up their supply of apologies or excuses before the business begins actively. Two cases were reported yesterday—one from Tennessee, in which a disguised ruffian suffered deserved death, and another from Kentucky, which is explained as a simple frolic, you know, resulting from too free use of the native wine of the country. Instead of explaining that " when wine is in " the truth comes out," the Associated Press apologizes for this trifling affair, as follows: apologizes for this trifling affair, as follows: A number of frightened magness from Kentucky, opposite Gairo, brought a report that a hand of Ku-Kinx visited the angross in that vicinity last night, giving them twenty-four hours in which to loave the country. Later information proves the Ku-Kinging to have been a drunken frolic of half a dozen youths, aged from sixteen to ninetenty pare, one of whom rocklossly shot at a negro, inflicting a flesh wound in the arm.

THE New York Ecening Post gravely an comes that the "politician who would be-come a bondsman would be very likely to do so upon the condition that he should be permitted to control some part of the patronage and influence of the customhouse," &c. This is quite probable in the especial case in question. Messrs. FENTOX, PHELPS, ROBERTS, and CHITTENDEN will be very likely to control some of the patronage and influence of Collector pro tem MER-EITT's office, and they will control it in the interest of an especial clique of Liberal Re-publican politiciaus, of mon who sold out to the Democracy in 1572, and who would have repeated the sale in 1876 if they had not been themselves bought up like sheep in the shambles by promises of patronage under the present Administration. It was for this very reason that General MERRITI was appointed-simply to give this gang of malcontents control of the custom-bouse machine. And this is called civil-service

An exchange suggests that some signifince might now be attached to the fact that one of the most serious specifications in the impeachment case against ANDREW JOHNSON was based upon his abuse of the appointing power. The civil-teaure act sed at that time to prevent further similar abuse by the Executive, still remains upon the statute books, but under the present Administration it is practically a has been dead-letter. To illustrate, the recent appointment of ALEX. REED, of Cincinnati, to

there was anything improper in the act, he would have saved himself from the suspicion now so widely entertained that his motives were improper. As it is, he is wise in making the amouncement that he is done with public life, as he does in a pleasant letter of recent date, from which we make the following extract:

Colonel FITZSIMMONS, the Democratic marshal, who was appointed upon Scienter Gospoo's assurance that he could break up the Illicit liquor traffic in three menths, seems utterly powerless to suppress the lawless bands in his district, and the chief agent expresses the opinion that nothing but the pressure of troops will subdue them. On this point it might be well to hear Colonel FITZSIMMONS' where. When first appointed he declared that the presence of soldiers only "simmyed" the men engaged in defrauding the Government. Now that two or three of his officers have been killed, he may have concluded that a little more "aunoyance" of the kind indicated would do no harm.

sneaking design to take advantage of the sheate and suspend the friends of Mr. CONKLING pending the recoss, which will last until after the election. It is a pity the correspondent did not give his reader, the benefit of this explanation, but he sufficiently establishes the machine spirit which prompted this uncivil service movement in the following paragraph:

Novement in the following paragraphs: Senator CONKLING's friends and admirers deem this action a direct thrust at the distin-guished Senator from New York, intended to cripple him in the race for re-election. They see in it a rebuise to CONKLING for his antag-onism toward the Administration, and victory onism toward the Administration, and victory for Evant's over Conklino, and a yielding to the claims of the suit-Conklino, and a yielding to the claims of the suit-Conklino flepublicans of New York, whose key-note was sounded recently by ELLES II. Romen's in his paper, urging the Administration to take docisive and prompt action in this and kindred matters, as a means of helping the Republican party of New York State to rid itself of the dominioring away of Conklino, and to enable them to put forward and have a chance of olecting some such man as Representative Hiscock, instead of nitimate defeat, or worse—ally years more of Conklino.

A PATHETIC tale comes up from Long branch. "President" TILDEN has been stay. ing there for a time, looking, it is said, solin, if not unhappy. His favorite exercise the story goes, is a promenade "On th "Beach," not after the gay, flicting style of the song, which relates the incidents of

One fine summer's day : but with his hands clasped behind him completely absorbed in a brown study There are many explanations that might be offered for this gloomy mood of the Gra-mercy Park bachelor, but none of them exactly fit the case. His heart has been s hardened by a career of reckless and crimi nal railroad-wrecking, stock-jobbing, and income thefts that it is hardly probable he is conscience-smitten. His lonesome strolls are more likely devoted to reflections and regrets over his anti-Southern-claims letter and his soul is no doubt gangrened with jealousy of President HAVES, who, according to ALEX. STEPHENS, is a better South ron to-day than he would or could be, were he to act as President for a thousand years But he is not without hope. In a few days POTTER'S Perjury Mill will begin grinding at Atlantic City, and the sulphurous blasts as they are wafted North will give words to the voiceless occan waves of encouragement to his weary heart. The gloom will depart from his brow, and his step will becommore elastic as he listens with fond cager-ness to the dulcet falsehoods of red-headed JIM, and thinks how fruitful his last ontlay

This is done, too, in the face of the fact that some of the Presidential nomina tious which have been obserious to the have been confirmed by means of their direct agency. In short, the drift of the situ ation points emphatically toward inter-partisan strife and the President alone is to blame for having started the current in tha direction. There was peace at the adjournment of Congress, and he has willfully and maliciously disturbed it. If he has any other object in view in this course than a repetition in 1880 of the treachery of 1879, we have failed to discover it, and we have studied the indications closely.

Lee. Grant's losses from the Rapidan to Appomattox Court-House, from Confederate Democratic authorities, in killed, wounded, death by disease, and prisoners, was 115,000. Grant was operating in an ecemy's country, from which he never retreated; an anemy acting almost constantly on the defunsive, in a country fortified by nature as also by the highest engineering skill, in jungle, forest, awamp and mountain. The campaign lasted twelve months. Lee's losses from May, some time in the early part of the mouth, 1981, to July 4, of same year, from Chancellorsville to "know how it was yourself" by attacking the Astile of Gettysburg, where he learned to "know how it was yourself" by attacking the Pederals. His losses on that field footed up 30,000—15,000 prisoners, 0,000 found dead, and 8,000 wounded remaining on the field, beside 7,000 carried off by a wagen train twenty-five niles in length. At the same rate—60,000 loss in two months, or 30,000 per mouth—had Lee continued fighting twelve months as the Army of the Potomae fought in Virginia, his losses would have aggregated 339,000.
